LONG-LASTING, GOOD-LOOKING

The search is on for Setra's finest oldtimer.

Do you have an old but elegant Setra photo filed away somewhere in your archives? Or perhaps even a particularly "well-travelled" genuine Setra in your garage or barn? Then you have a good chance of winning a valuable prize, because we're now on the lookout for the best Setra photographic operational motif. For instance your immaculately restored Setra of oldtimer in front of your company building, or in a dramatic scenery setting.

We are also searching for the best-looking real-life Setra. Perhaps yours will turn out to be our favourite!

Send us your Setra photos or information on your oldtimer: year of manufacture, model and mileage. Don't miss this opportunity – each participant will take part in a draw for valuable prizes such as holidays and tickets to the World Cup football championship in France. The best pictures and the finest Setra oldtimer will be on display at the 1998 "IAA" (Germany's International Commercial Vehicle Show). Send your entries to the address below – we look forward to hearing from you!

Bus Appeals Body formed

Bus passengers that are not satisfied by the response of their local bus operator to a complaint can now take their appeal to the Bus Appeals Body. This is a national independent body which has been formed through a Confederation of Passenger Transport initiative and in close conjunction with the National Federation of Bus Users.

The Bus Appeals Body will be made up of operators and passengers as members under independent transport consultant Professor Bill Bradshaw, who will act as chairman. BAB will act as the final arbiter in any unresolved disputes between passengers and bus companies. It aims to be functioning by the Spring and will consider complaints arising from the operation of local buses and scheduled coach services. It will not become involved with policy matters on routes, schedul- ing, service levels or fare pricing. Any findings made by BAB are to be made available to the public and relevant Traffic Commissioners will be notified if an operator fails to act on its recommendations.

The formation of BAB has been welcomed by NFBU chairman Dr Caroline Cahm, who commented: 'This is an example of the bus industry responding positively to pas- sengers' needs. It is very good news indeed for the travelling public.' Veronica Palmer, director general of CPT, concluded: 'We are a customer led industry and this is a customer led initiative.'

Volvo Bus strengthens support for commercial operations

Volvo Bus has announced the consolidation of its bus, coach and parts sales activities under a new single operation headed by commercial director Steve Dewhurst. Steve will head a team of regional commercial managers seeking to maximise business potential and customer satisfaction on a territory basis. The team will be progressively recruited to ensure a smooth transition for customers, but should be completely in place by the end of the year.

In a related move, Duncan Crosby has joined the coach sales team at Yeates Bus & Coach, Volvo's wholly owned coach sales subsidiary. To further assist the activities of Volvo Commercial, the sales engineering, quality audit and technical engineering func- tions have been combined into a new Product Quality department headed by Norman Thomas. Its function will be to liaise with body- building partners and to assume responsibility for the quality of all new Volvo buses and coaches.

RDC aid to reduce traffic

The Rural Development Commission has provided grant funding for Aztec Coaches which will allow the company to work in conjunc- tion with Badgerline Buses to provide a rural minibus ser- vice. RDC claim the move is designed to support the Government's initiative on reduction of traffic levels and aims to become the founda- tion of a 360 degree service coverage around Bristol. The initial services will provide alternative transport for the community in Congresbury and the surrounding area.

Passengers wishing to use the service will be able to dial Aztec's 0800 Quality Partnership Phone & Ride service. The minibus service will link these passengers to Badgerline's X service bus stops in Congresbury, Blackwell and Hotwells. It is hoped that the transport inte- gration between Aztec and Badgerline will assist in reducing private car journeys in an area which has the high- est number of cars per head of population.

Metroline investment

Metroline Travel has announced an investment in almost 50 new buses worth around £4.5m. The company has ordered 16 Volvo Olympian double deckers with Alexander R -Type dual door bodies. The rest of the order consists of 32 Dennis Dart SLFs with Plaxton Pointer bod- ies. Of these, 21 will be dual door models. Deliveries are scheduled for later this year.

WANTED

Have you seen these men?

They are wanted for questioning following a series of allegations regarding their business activities

1. They have been selling parts for NEOPLAN coaches at prices below any other supplier in the UK. These prices have been consistently low & they have never attempted to lure customers with so called 'special offers' - having always being the most competitive
2. The service they give is considered to be their most serious offence as this level of service has never been seen at such a high standard ever before - They have insisted on a 24 hour, 7 day service with free of charge call outs!
3. It is alleged they stock over £100,000 of parts just for NEOPLAN coaches and in the unlikely event they haven't got the part you need - they get it for you within days.
4. Their customers are saying that their knowledge of parts for NEOPLAN's cannot be matched anywhere in the UK.
5. They not only stock chassis & body parts - they supply and fit Windscreens nationwide next day!

Should anyone have any further allegations or know the whereabouts of these two men then please telephone on the following number:-

The Genuine Alternative

Wright strengthen support

Robert Wright & Son has strengthened its aftersales support with the appointment of Sam McClaren as head of a new division dedicated to the provision of a fast, convenient aftersales service. The company had recently conducted a survey of 47 bus operators and identified a strong requirement for a 24-hour aftersales backup service. Seven out of ten operators questioned considered the quality of aftermarket support as a critical factor when placing new contracts.

Wright will launch the new division in the Spring, following the establishment of regional support centres. A pilot scheme has already been initiated and is proving to be highly successful with customers. Mr McClaren joined Wright in 1997 and has worked closely with directors identifying and appointing staff and agents that meet the criteria. His background is one of extensive experience in bus manufacturing, motor retailing and the tyre supply industry.

Shared responsibility

Metrobus of Orpington and Stagecoach Selkent are to assume joint responsibility for the operation of London Transport route C1 for four months. The route is to be operated by Travel London, a Travel West Midlands subsidiary, from the end of June.

Ferris to take UK's first Berkhof B12Ts

Welsh operator Ferris Holidays is shortly upgrading its fleet with the inclusion of four Berkhof Excellence 3000HD double decker coaches based on Volvo B12T chassis. All four will be equipped with 73 reclining seats, air conditioning, washroom and catering facilities. Ski boxes are to be fitted to the rear of the vehicles to free additional luggage space in the hold. All four will be painted in a new livery depicting traditional Spanish flamenco dancers and music.

Ferris has recently relocated its operation to Nantgarw which is much closer to Cardiff and the motorway network. Jason Ferris explained that the benefits of the move not only included new offices and a four-bay workshop at the purpose-built facility, but the reduction in overall annual mileage could easily result in savings of between £20,000 to £30,000 per year in diesel costs.

Beavers for Macau

Macau operator Transmac has taken delivery of 15 Mercedes Vario based Plaxton Beaver 2s, the first to be exported to the Far East. Unusually, the Beavers feature a two door layout with an exit behind the rear axle but include Sutrak air conditioning for passenger comfort. Transmac, which already runs a fleet of Plaxton Pointers, has now placed a repeat order for a further 15 for delivery later this year.

Other orders from the area include a pair of Beaver 2s for Discovery Bay Transit in Hong Kong, plus a new Cheetah for Hong Kong Mercedes Benz agent Zung Fu. The Cheetah will be used to promote the use of small, high specification coaches for executive transfer duties between hotels and the airport.

One of 15 Plaxton Beaver 2s recently delivered to Transmac in Macau.

Commercial Vehicle Show 40% bigger

The 1998 Commercial Vehicle Show is 40% larger than last year's Commercial Vehicle & Bodywork Show, and it will be 100% better - claims the Society of Motor Manufacturers & Traders. The event takes place in Hall 5 of the NEC from 24 - 26 February. Amongst the major truck and van manufacturers will be exhibits from bodywork specialists, components and parts producers, workshop equipment suppliers, legal services, friction material manufacturers, tyre companies and computer software houses. Although it is unlikely there will be any buses or coaches to look at, the show is really one for the engineers and is growing more popular every year.

Alf Moseley appointment

John Bass has been appointed by Alf Moseley Continental as sales manager for the West Midlands and Wales. John has a long history of involvement with the coach industry and joins the company from the AW Group where he specialised in the sale of secondhand coaches.

Beauty is more than skin deep

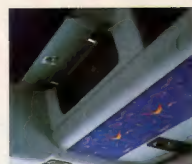

The new Solera, from Optare, is the 35-seater coach of the future. One look at its modern aerodynamic lines will tell you that.

But don't take this coach on face value, even though class-leading value is one of its many assets. Look beyond the exterior styling to the interior presentation. Step inside and you will see how everything we have learnt as one of the UK's premier coach suppliers has gone into the new Solera—generous legroom, extensive use of soft trim, raised seats and sunken gangway which significantly increases luggage space. It looks superb and, to the passenger, it feels even better. All this comfort sits on the superbly engineered and proven Mercedes-Benz O1120L coach chassis, with an up-graded front axle and rear air suspension. Up front there's the Mercedes-Benz 'Big Six' turbo intercooled engine, developing 211 bhp and giving excellent fuel economy.

Book a seat for a Solera test drive today and discover why it's not just a pretty face.

BOVA

Perfecting a niche

Bova's Futura is possibly the most distinctive coach in Europe, certainly it is the only one my wife can identify without resorting to reading the badges. By the end of last year close to 4,300 Futuras had been built and if all goes to plan the 5,000 mark will be reached in the latter part of 1999. The Futura's appearance, low weight and proven record have made it popular with operators throughout Europe and beyond.

Now sold in the UK through Moseley (PCV) Ltd, Moseley in the South, Moseley Distributors and Optare Coach Sales, the Futura in its many guises is the only design produced by Autobusfabriek Bova b.v. of Valkenswaard in the Netherlands. Though the model was first seen in 1983, the way in which it is built and the company producing it has changed tremendously in the intervening period.

Having been an independent company in 1989 Bova became a founder member, with DAF Bus, of the short lived United Bus group. Although that group collapsed at the end of 1993, all of the individual companies within it survived to find new owners. Bova's shares are now split between: HAL Investments (an offshoot of the Holland America Line shipping company)(35%); a private investment by Wim van de Leegte (but not part of the VDL Group) (21%); Wolf Lijmer (8%); the family of Piet van Doorne (21%); Martin van Doorne (11%); and Wim van Doorne (4%).

I heard the recent story of the company and its plans for the future from joint managing directors, Wim van Doorne and Marc Hendrikse, international sales director, Rik Pronk, and marketing manager, Wim Chatrou, when I visited the plant.

Before looking at Bova's

aims and ambitions, it is first worth considering what the strengths of the company are. The joint managing directors listed seven key strengths they believe the product has over its competitors including its design, reliability, low cost of ownership, and its multi-functional nature. On top of this they mentioned good secondhand values, after sales service and the strong relationships between the company and its customers. The importance of these attributes and the measures being taken to ensure that they become even stronger is evident in every aspect of the Bova operation.

Strategy

Marc Hendrikse and Wim van Doorne explained that, after the collapse of United Bus, Bova had had to completely rethink its strategy, and in doing so several market factors were assumed. These were that: there would continue to be overcapacity in the coachbuilding market; there would be an increasing influence from the products of low wage countries; the financial situation facing coach operators would continue to be poor; and that bus and coach production would continue to have a high image value for the bigger automotive manufacturers.

The core business was identified as the building and selling of luxury coaches, with three other activities - after sales, secondhand sales and coach financing - supporting this. The directors wanted to secure employment in the Netherlands and did not want either to build in a low wage country or to import a product built in one.

Deliberately choosing the position of a niche player with the niche being luxury coaches is, in principle, risky admits Marc. 'We only have one product line so we spread the risk over as many countries as possible,' he said, adding 'It has never occurred that the markets in all countries collapse in one year.'

In order to achieve their aims the plan is to be so efficient that it is possible to build competitive products in the Netherlands, even though it is a high wage economy. Marc explained, 'We want to continuously try to get better in the rationalisation of the production lines and in the lowness of our overheads so that we should have the lowest ex-factory price commensurate with quality. To survive we need to be the cost-leaders within luxury coaches.' He said that this was a key competence for Bova and added, 'We are convinced that no-one else can build integral luxury vehicles to our standard and with the same value for money as us.'

There is much Government talk in the UK about a stakeholder economy and Marc said that Bova too has a stakeholder philosophy in which the shareholders, staff, customers, suppliers and society are all stakeholders. 'We are looking for a long term relationship in all areas.' He explained that Bova had always thought this way but wanted to restate this view following the United Bus collapse.

Although the workforce has grown considerably in the last ten years, workers have an average of nine years employment with the company and there are many brothers, fathers and sons and other relatives employed. The long term approach is evident with customers too, which is one of the reasons that so much business is of a repeat nature. The company recognises that another of its key areas of competence is in dealing with family concerns, key players in the luxury coach business throughout Europe and in principle the niche where Bova want to be. Research has shown that 62% of new sales are to family businesses with 15 or fewer coaches and a further 18% to clients with between 16 and 35 coaches. Bova has also shown that it is committed to its export markets by maintaining its presence and not pulling in and out according to trading conditions, and this has stood it in good stead.

Objectives

The greatest annual output yet achieved was 394 coaches in 1992 and after a sharp dip in the years 1993 to 1995 production is getting back up towards that level with 367 in 1997 and a projection of 400 for this year. The directors would like to achieve the maximum factory capacity of between 500 and 600 a year through autonomous growth. They do not seek to take other manufacturers over.

Within Europe they are developing new markets with the opening of a subsidiary in Italy and one in Sweden. Poland is being actively investigated and there may also be possibilities in Hungary and the Czech Republic. There has been a conscious decision not to tackle Spain yet because, unlike Italy, it has yet to have a shakeout among body-builders.

Another alternative under consideration is sales or possibly production on other continents with the North American and Canadian markets and the Far East appearing attractive. Marc explained that Bova probably had the most to offer in high wage countries because demand for luxury coaches was higher in such markets and also because customers saw less benefit in a product of Bova's quality in an economy where man hours were cheap. Because of Bova's location in a high wage country, production techniques will always have to take account of new technology advances.

Manufacturing strategy

Part of the substantial additional structure incorporated in coaches meeting the ECE R66 rollover requirements.

In order to ensure that production efficiency is maximised, overheads are kept to a minimum and output is matched to demand periods Bova has developed an innovative manufacturing strategy. A modular assembly system coupled with a very focussed product range is at the core of Bova's efficiency. The production process has been rationalised and the amount of outsourcing increased, although many items including seats are still made in-house. The process has resulted in a degree of de-skilling but care has been taken to maintain and develop expertise within the workforce.

An example of efficiency which is also linked to the long term relationships with suppliers previously mentioned, is that new developments are jointly developed with suppliers. This means that the development department does not have to be too big and also ensures that the people working on a particular item are already skilled in that area.

Production levels of 11 a week in winter and only six a week in summer require a very flexible and motivated workforce. Throughout the winter everybody works a 42.5 hour week but gets paid for a 38 hour week. This evens itself out during the summer months when there is no production on Fridays and a number of other additional holidays are taken. The system was introduced with the full co-operation of the Works Council and the agreement of the workforce. Another method of increasing capacity at the peaks has been to join forces with other local manufacturers requiring similar skills but at different times. Bova jointly employs a number of staff who spend the winter building coaches and the summer working for different engineering based companies.

Evidence that the system is becoming increasingly efficient can be seen in the number of people required to build a coach which dropped from 37 in October 1992 to 32.75 in February 1997. In fact the gain was greater than it appears as the bigger 15 metre coaches were introduced during this period. The build time for a coach has dropped from six weeks to three weeks and one day.

Focussed product range

Having a focussed product range does not mean that Bova is unwilling to provide its customers with what they want or anything out of the ordinary - far from it. Of 1997's production of close to 370 almost 350 were different. Marc explained, 'We try to build in as many requirements as possible but we don't go outside the basic modular system unless we can see scope for 50 units a year. Within the system we have scope for many variants.' The Futura is available at lengths of 10, 12, 13, 14 and 15 metres in high floor (3.5m) FH form and at 12 and 15 metres in low floor (3.3m) FL form. A lower (3.15m) height FVD option was offered prior to 1992 but it was unpopular because it offered little luggage capacity and has been dropped. Although the company was among the first to takes vehicles with the enhanced structure required to meet the ECE R66 rollover requirements as standard, though individual continental operators such as OAD are beginning to opt for it. Similarly there is no customer demand from Europe for seatbelts although lapbelts will be introduced from 1999.

The Futura FH13 which features a 12.7m overall length on two axles with a 6.8m wheelbase. Forty four of this model have been built to date.

Bova has a long history of manufacturer - is the strength of the network that has been set up for the sale of secondhand vehicles. In common with most European manufacturers Bova takes in part exchanges against new vehicles, either directly or through dealers. In the days of United Bus this was an area in which the company was found seriously lacking with large numbers of unsold secondhand vehicles building up as production of new vehicles increased. The current team recognises the importance of moving part exchanges on quickly and efficiently and has worked hard to ensure that earlier problems are never repeated. The result is a secondhand operation completely separated from the main business.

An advantage this operation has over British dealers is that all of the mainland European markets drive on the right which means that coaches do not necessarily have to be found a new owner in the country in which they originally operated.

Secondhand vehicle centres have been set up at which vehicles can be inspected. These are located at Buren which is between Dortmund and Kassel in Germany, in Paris and near to the factory in Valkenswaard. In addition to this a network of over 50 traders has been established globally to whom vehicles can be sold on a wholesale basis. As a result the turnover of used vehicles is now between 500 and 600 annually, and demand is such that the secondhand operation is close to having to buy in vehicles to feed the network.

The main markets for secondhand vehicles are Eastern Europe, Greece, Benelux, Germany and France. Eastern Europe is becoming much more selective in what it will buy. Once it would buy anything but now the demand is for volume products like the Mercedes 0303, Setra S215HD, Neoplan Cityliner and the Futura.

'It took us three years to sort it out but it's good now. We don't consider it as a problem any more,' said Marc.

DAF

One of the unique selling points of the Bova Futura and its predecessors has been the DAF engine and the relationship between DAF and Bova has always been a close one. Though it is close it is not exclusive and both MAN and Cummins options are currently also available, the more expensive Mercedes option having been dropped through lack of demand. In Germany customers overwhelmingly opt for DAF power rather than the home built product but in France, Belgium and Italy there is demand for MAN. Overall around 80% of production is DAF powered. DAF only supply engines today, its axles are no longer used. These are now supplied by ZF who are independent of the engine and other vehicle manufacturers.

At present there is no doubt that Bova's management see the relationship with DAF as a strength rather than a weakness, though they stress that they are not dependent upon DAF. When DAF had its difficulties in 1993 Bova had engineered the Futura to take a MAN unit within two months. They see no likelihood of DAF engine production ceasing because with it would go one of the marque's USPs, but added, 'If Paccar did stop production of DAF engines we would offer another engine or even two exploit the potential for coaches of between 12 and 15 metres and has already produced over 100 three-axle vehicles, there are currently no plans to build to an overall width of 2.55m because this is not acceptable in all markets.

Another good reason for not having too many models is the belief that there is a minimum number that any manufacturer needs to produce in order to be able to cope with legislative changes. Bova estimate this will come up to between 250 and 300 a year of the same type of integral. This does not mean that there is a reluctance to meet the needs of specific markets. The UK is still the only country which producing very special Futura variants for unusual purposes and this continues. Camping coaches and satellite coaches have been built in the past but today the demand is more likely to be for band buses. Customers can choose to have Bova build the entire vehicle or a shell can be supplied for others to complete. Team and VIP coaches are also popular, two 15m examples having recently been supplied to German ice hockey teams.

Two of Bova's core competencies have already been mentioned, the third - perhaps surprisingly for a new vehicle others.'

As Bova penetrates deeper into a growing number of markets demand may change. 'If we went to North America and they wanted Detroit Diesel and Allison we could do it,' said Marc.

Production

Production began on the current site as recently as 1977 following a move from small premises in the centre of Valkenswaard. The first building erected, known as Bova 1, is in the process of refurbishment and it is here that the framing process is carried out. The Bova 2 unit followed in 1987.

Despite the range of variants, only three main jigs are required. The 12.7m and 15.0m models share the same wheelbase as do the 12.0m and 13.5m models and each wheelbase shares a jig. The third jig is dedicated to 12.0m because the bulk of demand is still for this length of vehicle. Pre-assembly stations are used for the front, rear, side panels and roof section, the latter being steel framed with a one piece GRP panel bonded to it. Once the frame is complete but before panning has started, the vehicle is taken to the paintshop where it receives a polyurethane protective coating. Everything below the coach floor is corrosion resistant being either coated, wax injected or made of either GRP or aluminium.

Throughout the build process an increasing amount of bonding is employed to overcome the need for drilling which can compromise anti-corrosion protection systems. This extends to the use of mouldings glued into the frame for some sidelockers and bulkheads. Not only are these more efficient to produce, they are lighter.

Touring the plant there were quite a number of vehicles destined for UK customers in build. Not only were there coaches for Britain, a number of British workers have also been recruited. A recent innovation which started in Bova 2 and has now been introduced in Bova 1 is a system of self-steering teams. In both factories there are people responsible for seeing each coach through the plant. They look at each vehicle through the eyes of the customer, checking that all aspects of quality are up to scratch and the documentation is completed. They are additionally charged with making sure that the customer's wishes are met.

Many manufacturers have ceased producing their own seats but this is not the case at Valkenswaard where seats continue to be manufactured and trimmed in-house. Trimmed in Holdsworth moquette, they are taken to the lines by means of a rail system to minimise handling. I saw some completed vehicles with sets of untrimmed seats in them and was told that some importers build stock vehicles but do not wish to select a moquette until a sale is made. In these circumstances untrimmed seats are installed to ensure that everything is supplied in time, and the seats removed and trimmed at a later stage.

Once a vehicle is complete it is driven for between two and three hours to check that everything is in order. It then undergoes a thorough pre-delivery check before final valeting is carried out.

The eight paint bays have been extended to accept 15 metre vehicles.

Future developments

No one would expect the company to give too much away about its future model development plans although the directors did restate their long held position that the company would not be building on chassis. They added, 'The Futura will see the year 2000 if that gives you any clue. It's no secret that we are constantly working on the models within the framework of keeping the qualities and distinctiveness of the Futura and still modernising it.'

It is in the market rather than the models that the directors anticipate the major upheavals. Marc commented, 'We are convinced that throughout Europe the total landscape of the bus and coach industry will change in the next five years. The big automotive companies will have to decide what to do with their bus manufacturing divisions. They are all moving, and as they are the big players, it has an enormous impact. We do not pretend to know better than them, but we are certain it will change.'

The UK

The UK has been a very important market for Bova and though it is not now as crucial as it was in the early 1980s, when the UK took over half of Bova production, it remains the third biggest after France and Germany. Marc commented, 'We would like to continue being market leader among the integral manufacturers. We aim for a position of about 5% of the total coach market in the UK, though we are always looking to develop it and would not necessarily stop there. It is a chassis dominated market but we see that the original bias of operators who think that a chassis is a more rigid proposition than an integral is slowly but surely going away.'

Rik Pronk agreed on the importance of the UK market to Bova. He added, 'It is one of the reasons we have put in a service inspector to liaise between customers and the factory. We want to ensure our service level is at the highest possible point. It means we have to react quickly. An operator wants to talk to someone in his own country, who he can deal with and get a decision from the factory. He can say yes or no on warranty matters. People like short, direct communication lines.'

'I think it is a feeling, rather than a hope, that the UK is becoming more a part of Europe in its buying patterns. A lot of UK customers want products that European customers can have. Why would National Express take 12m coaches when it could have 13.58m?'

Summary

Talking to the Bova management it is clear that it isn't only the product range that is focussed, the team know exactly where they are in the market and are concentrating all their energies on maintaining and developing this position. Bova's recent history has been eventful but the difficult times have provided lessons that have been well learned. Being a niche player is, as Marc Hendrikse admits, risky. By constantly refining the product, paying careful attention to the manufacturing process, looking after the customers and ensuring that quality in all parts of the operation remains high Bova is minimising the risks and putting itself in a good position to continue growing.

Universitybus Building a market

Universitybus Ltd is owned by the University of Hertfordshire based at Hatfield. The bus company provides a network of routes across the centre of the county linking the university's disparate sites with major population centres and transport interchanges. Its unusual status, and the fact that it offers scheduled services to the community as a whole, has projected it into the lime-light both inside and outside the industry, not least because of the innovative way in which it has built its network. Yet as Philip Waters, University Deputy Registrar and Director of Universitybus, pointed out to B&CB recently it's only really been other operators that have questioned the university's involvement. His view is that for the students, staff and residents of Hertfordshire it was a logical and much needed development in filling gaps that had historically existed in the county's public transport network. Student movements have laid the foundations for what is a commercially viable network that benefits everyone.

Core operation is the 600/602 which gives a half hourly frequency between

One of the Wright bodied Dart SLFs loads at Hatfield Campus.

Welwyn Garden City and Watford via St Albans. Increased loadings have been aided by integrating the Hertfordshire County Council route 311 contract. However on its 600 series routes the company's vehicles can be found as far afield as Hitchin in the north, Harrow in the south or Hemel Hempstead and Hertford, west and east. Timetables have been steadily built up so that Hatfield Campus is now linked with amenities in St Albans every 15 minutes for much of the day. In addition Universitybus operate the B9 Borehamwood local service on Sundays, the HA1 Harpenden town service

Monday to Saturday and the 330/340 between Welwyn Garden City and Hemel Hempstead is covered Monday to Saturday in the evenings.

The company's development has been dramatic since its inception in 1992. Then it was part of UH Ventures, a university owned company that has a range of commercial interests including research and consultancy. The university also has a range of other 'commercial' trading operations including security, catering and accommodation. Universitybus was formed as a separate company in August 1994 and today has a fleet of around 35 vehicles. Originally based at a small wooden garage in Wall Hall Campus, one of the university's principal sites, it now operates from spacious premises within the former marketing hall of British Aerospace in Trident Avenue off Comet Way, Hatfield. As well as office accommodation and a staff kitchen, undercover parking is available for most of the fleet, and space to carry out a full range of in-house engineering. Adjacent parking has been a source of additional revenue following the securing of a contract from London Buses to maintain its reserve fleet of 30 Routemasters. Since the completion of that task, the site has been used to store sales stock for Metroline Travel, one of the former London Buses subsidiaries.

In May 1995 Michael Finn was appointed Universitybus General Manager. Michael started his career with Trent as a NBC management trainee and took up his new appointment from Luton & District where he had been High Wycombe Commercial Manager. He is one of the new breed of 'hands-on' bus managers. Enthusiastic about the future of public transport, he has a natural empathy for both his staff and passengers. Working hard over the past three years to instil and develop best practices from the industry, he believes that the challenge now is to keep up with standards set by the big groups which have done so much to improve their own performances in recent years. The company employs a fleet engineer, traffic manager and four inspectors who, as well as providing relief driving cover and monitoring vehicle and driving standards, also handle calls to the freephone Universitybus travel hotline.

Fleet profile

The majority of the Universitybus fleet are

Dennis Darts. Eight are standard floor 9.8 metre models with either Carlyle, Wright or Marshall bodywork. The most recent additions are twelve 10.8 metre Wright bodied Dennis Dart SLFs bought over the last few months, and include the first Foline Crusader which had been in service for about three weeks prior to B&CB's visit. The additional cost of the low floor buses was met by Hertfordshire County Council and they are primarily used to provide a full low floor service on the key 600/602 routes. Average age across the fleet is just four and a half years.

The company attracted considerable interest in 1994 when it purchased four American-built Blue Bird buses seating 51 with standing capacity for a further 20 from the AW Group, Ratby. Philip Waters pointed out that in the very early days the company had 'operated with what it could get.' However it has always tried to maintain an open mind when it came to vehicle procurement, be actively prepared to consider new concepts, and wanted to buy new. The Blue Birds offered an impressive list of safety features and seemed to be ideal for a student based market. However they proved to be unreliable on inter-urban services, a problem compounded by extended down time waiting for parts from America.

The buses have since found a niche working on school work, the kind of work for which they were originally designed. Universitybus has four routes numbered in the 800 series linking How Wood and Sandringham School, Colney Heath with the Dame Alice Owen School at Potters

Bar, Borehamwood with Townsend School and Dunstable to Nicholas Breakespear School. One Blue Bird can also usually be found on the P1 University Park and Ride which operates throughout the day. It connects the main Hatfield campus with a large car park about half a mile way on the British Aerospace site adjacent to Universitybus's premises. Only limited on site parking is available at the main campus and this is restricted to staff, third year and post-graduate students. The Blue Birds have also offered useful capacity on contract work and the company's programme of day excursions.

Private hire is a small but important part of the business. Two Reeves Burgess bodied Mercedes minicoaches are in the fleet alongside three Mercedes midibuses which also see some local service use. Full size needs are met by a Berkhof bodied Volvo B10M 49 seater which was joined on the day of B&CB's visit by a 53 seat Dennis Javelin with automatic gearbox. Collected by Fleet Engineer Derek Watson, it had been bought from Eastwoods in Birmingham. The L-registered Plaxton Premiere 320 had worked for refurbished last year. Reflecting its desire to see what was available in the market, Universitybus took a Leyland National Greenway in 1992 which remains in the fleet. At that time other Nationals were operated but as Philip pointed out, such has been the investment by operators in new low floor buses, few Nationals remain in service within Hertfordshire. In 1995 the company also bought the first two Mercedes OH1416 Urbanrangers which carry 47 seat Wright bodies. A Marshall Minibus works the Harpenden town service for Hertfordshire County Council under a similar contract to the PB1 Potters Bar town route operated by MTL London using the same type of vehicle. The additional cost of buying a low floor was funded by the council.

Peak time loadings on some of Universitybus's routes are heavy. Although the Wright Crusader bodied Dart SLF is an ideal vehicle for most of the company's local service needs, Michael and his team are also considering heavy duty 12 metre citybus options for the future.

A new approach

As Philip Waters explained the university's decision to establish its own bus company in 1992 was a response to the needs of the time. In 1992 what had been Hatfield Polytechnic was set to receive university status and an influx of 15,000 students per academic year. The polytechnic had itself merged with Wall Hall College at Aldenham in 1985. As well as a centre there, and two in Hatfield, the new university had a Hertford campus and had established links with colleges in Watford.

Operator Focus

Historically, with its close proximity to London, public transport within Hertfordshire has developed on a north-south axis. However staff and student transport needs ran across the county and there was no network in place to meet their needs. The problem had been compounded by the disappearance of a bus using culture within the county and some of the highest car ownership anywhere in the country. What is more, large numbers of students needed to move at fixed times of day. Just as a company recognises the need to develop business, so the university understood that is long term viability depended on the right kind of public transport being in place to serve its facilities, non of which could sustain unrestrained car use even if that had been an option for many students.

Senior management looked at the resources and experience that were in-house. They decided that the university's own small fleet of buses, originally inherited from Wall Hall College, could form the basis of a commercial operation. However, for it to be self financing, it needed to be a public service generating fare paying passengers as well. If the university had not already had limited operating experience to draw on, the option would not have been pursued. However, 'Once you are committed, it develops a momentum of its own,' observed Philip. The university could see where the market was going. The option of developing a network with an existing operator was not taken up. 'We did not like what the market was offering at that time,' pointed out Philip who did not feel that there was sufficient understanding of the university's likely needs.

Standing alone

The university drew on the expertise within its own departments in the same way a business would. However, recognising the importance of relevant skills from the industry when Universitybus became a separate company, it recruited first Michael Finn and later Derek Watson. At board level it appointed Gordon Tennant, Commercial Director of Metroline Travel. Prominent local businessman and the first Universitybus Chairman, Jo David, is also a member of the University's Board of Governors. More recently the university's deputy chief executive, Dr, Tim Wilson has taken over as chairman.

'Universitybus has to continually demonstrate that it is worthy of our support,' Philip continued. 'We are careful to benchmark all the time so that we can demonstrate that we are providing value. The network has to be self supporting.' Universitybus has to tender for the university's work each year. Although this is not open to competitive tender, Philip explained that, as the bus company's owner, the university has access to its books and so can scrutinise its activities in detail to check that value for money is being delivered. It can see what industry costs are while at the same time monitoring tender prices on local routes. These figures can then be set against the market test undertaken in 1992 when the possibility of establishing a network with an outside operator was under consideration. 'These references give us a pretty good idea of what things should cost,' concluded Philip. The same criterion applies to network development.

Although fares for the general public are in line with other local operators, Michael explained later that student fares, currently set at a maximum 60p single on production of a university identity card, are based on the operational costings presented by the bus company. The university does not subsidise fares paid by students and staff on the bus. However it does make up the projected loss of revenue on term or annual tickets bought at university receptions and the Hatfield campus cashier's office. The free Park and Ride, with the specific objective of containing car use at Hatfield campus, comes under a separate contract.

Both Philip and Michael emphasise that Universitybus is about growing the market for all. Like other operators in the county, the company is doing its best to change the car culture and support the TravelWise awareness campaign developed by Herts County Council and has recently joined the Hertfordshire Bus and Coach Operators Association. The university is a member of the Business TravelWise initiative.

However, this is not to say that the company has not been in competitive situations. The need to link educational sites in Watford led to the development of two routes in the town. Philip acknowledges that the market potential of the services which linked north Watford estates with the town centre soon became apparent and it was not long before The Shires responded with their own services. After initial competition a joint service was established with each accepting the others' tickets. However, in September last year The Shires decided it no longer wanted to continue this arrangement. Reflecting the level of co-operation that now exists, the two operators came to agreement and a small route exchange took place with the result that Universitybus de-registered its Watford services.

Philip underlined the importance of talking to the county council and other operators when it comes to developing complementary services which grow the market. This is reflected in Universitybus's timetable booklet which contains details of a service operated by County Bus & Coach where University of Hertfordshire student concessionary tickets are accepted, and some Sovereign services including the 330/340, an HCC supported Sunday service and the 366 linking Hatfield campus with Potters Bar and Luton.

Universitybus's unique position means that it is not free to take the kind of commercial risks that might be open to another bus company. If the university is considering a new link or developing an existing service it expects the bus company to respond with a commercially viable proposal. Wayfarer 3 ticketing is a useful source of data for this. 'Everything goes through a very careful planning process,' emphasised Philip. The objective is to build something that is stable and will not destabilise any other operator. He highlighted Universitybus's need to serve markets whether it be students and staff or the general public. 'We can't afford to neglect any group,' he said.

Looking at the broader benefits of service co-operation Philip noted how expanded route coverage gives increased opportunity which impacts across the market. Several other Hertfordshire operators have introduced fare schemes for students reflecting the increased awareness of the county's growing student population. On the whole the county council has shown itself to be very pro-public transport and has helped fund low floor buses in many instances. However there is some regret that revision in its child concessionary fare scheme has led to reduced support for operators which may impact on the marginal viability of some routes.

Other sources of work

An important contract, which comes as part of the university's nurse training programme for some north London boroughs and Hertfordshire involves significant movements of students. It's a steadily expanding area of work. Philip recalled that the university used to hire coaches but Universitybus has proved to be more cost effective. Work for other colleges such as West Herts is also under undertaken.

Although the university provides the bus company with its core business, Universitybus does look for development in other areas, not least bridging the gap in transport between the LT area and the county itself. Both Philip and Michael believe there is a cultural barrier that needs to be crossed. 'Links are not as good as they should be, nor as good as in other parts of the country. We need to close the gaps,' commented Philip. Not all options will be viable but the objective is to try and identify where there is need. Evidence of this commitment are developments of the 614/615, an hourly day time link between Barnet and Hatfield campus and a recently improved morning peak service with has reduced journey times from Edgware and Queensbury. Under consideration is a link between Enfield and Hatfield via Colney Heath that would be routed so as not to impinge to a great extent on any existing bus operation.

Universitybus will tender for Herts County Council work which it feels fits within its existing business. It is also on the London Transport tender list and, although it has not yet secured any work, clearly feels that there is a will within LT to extend the number of operators on London work. Philip reiterated the bus company's sensitive position within society as part of a respected academic institution. It can't be seen to risk its own or the university's reputation. The rate of return on new work must be right. 'We are hyper sensitive as to what people think. People can have a go at us,' he observed. In relation to other operators he was clear that Universitybus could not afford to unduly upset them. 'We will only have a secure long term future in partnership with the county and other operators. There are one or two gaps we want to close. We are at optimum size.'

Quality driven

Michael Finn emphasised the importance of a quality bus operation in providing an alternative to the car. He defined this as clean easy access buses, smart well-trained staff, convenient services and easy access to information. The company's well produced and easy to use timetable booklet is a very good example of this. 'Students are a very demanding market,' he said. Both Michael and Philip recalled the way that the industry had changed around 18 months to two years ago with the move towards low floor buses. The way forward seemed much clearer in terms of vehicle procurement and this has been confirmed by driver and passenger reaction to Universitybus's low floor Darts.

Michael observed that there have been complaints when one of the spare Dart SLFs has stood in for a standard bus. Passengers want to know why they can't have the low floor bus all the time. Disabled groups also complain as to why they are not getting low floor buses on their local route. However wheelchair use is very low. 'The SLF has changed the market beyond all recognition,' said Philip. Commenting on the new Wright Crusader Floline body he said, 'increasing the total low floor area definitely improves peoples perception of accessibility.'

Support from the county council has extended beyond the partial funding of low floor buses. The Hatfield Bus Link in College Lane with its bus gate, a lowering and raising bollard, restricts access to the Hatfield campus to buses along this corridor. Plans are in hand to develop the

A Wright Handybus bodied Dart.

Hatfield campus interchange with monitors giving route information and additional bus shelters. The road layout will be redesigned to allow buses easier access to the stands. Philip acknowledges that the university's connection with Universitybus has given it a voice in local transport policy that it might not otherwise have had. 'There is the opportunity to be involved in a wide range of transport issues, many of which have been incorporated in the university's transport document,' he said.

With the Government's White Paper pending Philip can see the role of local authorities in public transport being extended. Michael underlined the importance of councils as infrastructure authorities for the industry. If the Government gives local councils the power to levy a tax on workplace parking, employers will have to decide whether they pass the cost on to their staff or absorb it themselves. If they do the later it could become a taxable benefit for their staff anyway. 'Authorities need reasonable powers to develop standards,' Philip argued. The entry standard into quality partnerships needed to be higher than that demanded by the traffic commissioners while both men agreed that the quality partnership model was one that they preferred.

In the future

Michael is clear about the importance of taking the Universitybus message to its passengers. A 'contra deal' has been agreed with a local radio station which has given valuable publicity and there are plans to extend both route advertising and promoting the university's services on the buses themselves. Other initiatives include more roadside publicity and the availability of bus information through the internet. The company is also keen to experiment with environmentally friendlier fuels. Environmental issues have a high profile in the student market.

An important new area under development is the use of smart card ticketing. Herts County Council has already been developing the technology in conjunction with Transmo Citycard. It launched its first scheme in conjunction with The Shires in the Hemel Hempstead area last December. The university is looking at ways of combining the data applications of its existing student cards with Hertfordshire's cards. The expectation is that a joint scheme will be introduced.

Within the company, the drive to improve standards is clear, whether it be a driver's handbook, training procedures or customer care training. When B&CB visited, Michael was looking at the question of bus cleanliness. Universitybus takes its responsibilities very seriously and it is now an established name in transport within the county.

Fleet Additions

Flights invest in Plaxtons

Five Plaxton Premiere bodied coaches have been added to the Flights Coach Travel fleet. Another nine are expected in the Spring and these will be split between Flights' Birmingham operation and Bournemouth based Excelsior Holidays. The five coaches just placed into service are based on Dennis Javelins and form part of the core private hire fleet. Flights more than doubled in size during 1997 with the acquisition of Excelsior and Central Coaches. The combined fleet now numbers 125 vehicles. Geoff Flight commented, 'It is important that as we expand we maintain the high levels of service quality which have been instrumental in the company's success, and to do this requires a continuing programme of carefully targeted investment.'

Mercedes for Oare's

Oare's Coaches of Holywell has taken delivery of its first new vehicle, a Mercedes Vario with Plaxton Beaver 2 body. It has been purchased for the Holywell Hoppa, a new local service contract which the company has won from Flintshire County Council.

With the security which a five year contract gave, brothers Wayne and Mark Oare felt it was right to invest in a new bus. Their coach has been built with 33 coach seats and overhead luggage racks to make it suitable for local private hire work in the evenings and on Sunday. The rear is unglazed, releasing additional space for a signwriting.

Oare's Coaches runs 19 vehicles and was founded 20 years ago by Wayne and Mark's father, George.

Speedlink Airport Service has placed a fleet of 19 Plaxton Prestige bodied DAF SB220 low floor buses into service on the FastTrain bus link connecting Heathrow Junction with Heathrow.

Kirkby Coach & Bus has supplied Derbyshire's oldest established coach firm, Hulley's of Baslow with a Plaxton Premiere 320 bodied Dennis Javelin. The 53 seater joins a 15 strong fleet and is the first new coach bought for 40 years.

Book Reviews

The Heyday of the bus: Scotland
Gavin Booth. Published by Ian Allan £13.99

This is an excellent selection of varied and interesting photos which capture breathtaking Scottish scenery, grey city streets and the character of the Scottish people all in one volume. Oh, and the odd bus gets a look in as well. It can be easy to write picture books off as light weight material, but the old adage about a picture being worth a thousand words comes into play with this work. Just how much Scotland has changed in what seems like a very short time is captured here. The reviewer's opinion of this book was not swayed by the fact that the author had managed to include a shot of a bus going to Izatt Avenue.

London Country Buses in Colour
Michael H. C. Baker.
Published by Ian Allan £13.99

The pictures in this book, which span the old LT country area and London Country after it, comfortably cover the sublime to the ridiculous. Lampposts and other protuberances growing out of every day vehicles going about their business abound and for those that like to see their buses in bits there are some of those classic garage line ups which London Country was understandably so touchy about at the time. Bearing in mind the large number of quality bus photographers at work around London during this period the variable quality of these photos is something of a surprise. However, their are some gems, and the work of R. C. Riley stands out.

BIP back Wheelsafe Squirrel

Raw materials supplier BIP Ltd says that it has been closely involved in the development of the latest device to prevent the loss of wheel nuts from heavy goods vehicles and coaches. The Mk II Squirrel, patented by Wheelsafe Ltd of Tisbury, Wiltshire is suitable for almost all 10-stud truck, coach and plant wheels and can be fitted in less than half-a-minute. Moulded-in ribs on the ten faces of the device prevent the nuts from vibrating loose, or even moving from their torqued up position.

A special grade of BIP's

Beetle high tech composite was developed for the application, enhanced by a special, post moulding conditioning process, to ensure that a high degree of flexibility combined with toughness, is maintained throughout all seasons and in all conditions.

Further information is available from Peter Tillin, UK Sales Manager, Engineering Thermoplastics Business, BIP Ltd, PO Box 3180, Tat Bank Road, Oldbury, West Midlands, B69 4PG. Tel: 0121 544 1555, Fax: 0121 552 4267.

The Mk II Squirrel has been patented by Wheelsafe and was developed in close co-operation with BIP.

Fleet system available from Freeway

ERF Manchester, one of the largest UK ERF dealers has introduced the Freeway fleet system which, says Freeway, has enabled the company to double its vehicle maintenance business over the last six months. There has been no increase in the number of administrative staff and paperwork has been reduced.

Freeway schedules servicing, inspections, oil changes and MOT's, automatically generating job cards and correspondence. Freeway maintain that the system can also monitor vehicle operating costs, and can quickly identify poor-performing and unreliable vehicles with accurate pence per mile figures. Savings can be made through reduced fuel, tyre and workshop costs, as well as lower stock holdings.

The company point out that due to a high degree of flexibility in the core design, the Freeway system adapts easily to different operational needs. Based on what it calls 'rapid application development technology,' Freeway maintains that its Windows developments have taken advantage of the latest automatic fuel and mileage recording, electronic vehicle tagging, mobile data collection and internet access technology.

Hindle consolidate operation

Hindle Auto Products has undertaken a review of its business and decided to consolidate its Halesowen operation with its Bradford business. The company says that all existing contacts will be supported by the Bradford office. General Manager David Hindle, Commercial Manager Joe Szalkiewicz, Parts Manager Gunter Prescott, Service Manager Chris Smith and Works Manager Kieron Seery can be contacted on 01274 727234 or Fax 01274 740237.

Grant Edward joins FLA

After more than two decades as a member of the Government Information Service, Grant Edward, formerly at the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, has joined the Finance and Leasing Association (FLA) as Head of Public Affairs.

With over 150 full and associated members, the FLA believes that it is the principal representative body of the UK finance and leasing industry. Collectively members supply 70% of all vehicle leasing, loans, hire purchase and personal contract purchase.

One-call connect

John Holman & Sons, the insurance product marketing company, has launched Holman One-Call Connect. Aimed at anyone who is finding it difficult to get insurance cover the scheme brings together Lloyd's and company underwriters and, says the company, offers competitive quotations for coaches. Also covered are drivers who have had multiple accidents or convictions, taxis, minibuses, kit cars and modified vehicles. Non-standard motorcycles, fleets and commercial vehicles also fall within its remit.

For a list of brokers in a particular area, details are available from John Holman & Sons, Tel: 01268 735566.
